... and eating fondue

Sir,—Surely fondue bourguignonne isn't eaten with a fork? In my experience it is always eaten with wooden sticks, rather like knitting needles or thin skewers. It is the fondue made of cheese that is eaten with a fork.

The eating of cheese fondue is, by the way, beset with some danger, according to my Swiss friends. The only safe drinks to take with it are, it seems, Kirsch and white wine. Anything else, I am assured, may well prove fatal.
